VERSES

To the AUTHOR of the

TRAGEDY of CATO.

WHILE you the fierce divided Britons awe,
And Cato, with an equal virtue, draw,
While envy is itself in wonder lost,
And factions strive who shall applaud you most;
Forgive this fond ambition of a friend,
Who hopes himself, not you to recommend;
And joins th' applause which all the learn'd bestow
On one, to whom a perfect work they owe.
To my * light scenes I once inscrib'd your name,
And impotently strove to borrow same:
Soon will that die, which adds thy name to mine;
Let me, then, live, join'd to a work of thine.

* Tender Hufband, dedicated to Mr. Addison.

RICHARRD STEEL.

Tho' Cato shines in Virgil's epic song,
Prescribing laws among th' Elysian throng;
Tho' Lucan's verse exalted by his name,
O'er Gods themselves has rais'd the hero's same;
The Roman stage did ne'er his image see,
Drawn at sull length; a task reserv'd for thee.
By thee we view the sinish'd sigure rise,
And awful march before our ravish'd eyes;
We hear his voice, afferting virtue's cause;
His sate renew'd our deep attention draws,
Excites by turns our various hopes and sears,
And all the patriot in thy scene appears.

On Tiber's banks thy thought was first inspir'd;
'Twas there, to some indulgent grove retir'd,
Rome's ancient fortunes rolling in thy mind,
Thy happy muse this manly work design'd:

Or in a dream thon faw'st Rome's genius stand,
And, leading Cato in his facred hand,
Point out th' immortal subject of thy lays,
And ask this labour, to record his praise.
'Tis done—the hero lives, and charms our age!
While nobler morals grace the British stage.
Great Shakespear's ghost, the solemn strain to hear,
(Methinks I see the laurell'd shade appear!)
Will hover o'er the scene, and wondring view
His fav'rite Brutus rivall d thus by you.
Such Roman greatness in each action shines,
Such Roman eloquence adorns your lines,
That sure the Sibyls books this year foretold;
And in some mystick leaf was seen inroll'd,

Rome, turn thy mournful eyes from Africk's shore,

Nor in her fands thy Cato's tomb explore!

When thrice fix hundred times the circling fun

' His annual race shall thro' the Zoadiack run,

· An isle remote his monument shall rear,

' And ev'ry generous Britain pay a tear.'

HAT do we fee! is Cato then become
A greater name in Britain than in Rome?
Does mankind now admire his virtues more,
Tho' Lucan, Horace, Virgil wrote before,
How will posterity this truth explain?

Cato begins to live in Anna's reign:"
The world's great chiefs in council or in arms,
Rife in your lines with more exalted charms;
Illustrious deeds in distant nations wrought,
And virtues by departed heroes taught;
Raise in your soul a pure immortal slame,
Adorn your life, and consecrate your same;
To your renown all ages you subdue,
And Cæsar sought, and Cato bled for you.

EDWARD YOUNG.

IS nobly done thus to enrich the stage And raife the thoughts of a degen'rate age, To show, how endless joys from freedom spring: How life in bondage is a worthless thing. The inborn greatness of your soul we view, You tread the paths frequented by the few, With fo much strength you write, and so much ease, Virtue, and fense! how durst you hope to please? Yet crouds the fentiments of ev'ry line Impartial clap'd, and own'd the work divine, Ev'n the four criticks, who malicious came, Eager to censure, and resolv'd to blame, Finding the hero regularly rife, Great while he lives, but greater, when he dies, Sullen approv'd too obstinate to melt, And ficken'd with the pleasures, which they felt. Not so the fair their passions secret kept, Silent they heard, but as they heard they wept, When gloriously the blooming MARCUS dy'd, And CATO told the Gods, ' I'm fatisfy'd.'

See! how your lays the British youth instance!

They long to shoot and ripen into fame.

Applauding theatres disturb their rest,

And unborn CATO's heave in ev'ry breast.

Their nightly dreams, their daily thoughts repeat,

And pulses high with fancied glories beat.

So, griev'd to view the Marathonian spoils,

The young THEMISTOCLES vow'd equal toils;

Did then his schemes of suture honours draw

From the long triumphs which with tears he saw.

How shall I your unrival'd worth proclaim,
Lost in the spreading circle of your same!
We saw you the great WILLIAM's praise rehearse,
And paint Britannia's joys in Roman verse.
We heard at distance soft, enchanting strains,
From blooming mountains, and Italian plains.
VIRGIL began in English dress to shine,
His voice, his looks, his grandeur still divine:
From him too soon unfriendly you withdrew,
But brought the tuneful OVID to our view.

Then,

Then, the delightful theme of er'ry tongue, Th' immortal MARLB'ROUGH was your darling fong. From clime to clime the mighty victor flew, From clime to clime as fwiftly you pursue. Still with the hero's glow'd the poet's flame, Still with his conquelts you enlarg'd your fame. With boundless raptures here the muse cou'd swell, And on your ROSAMOND for ever dwell ; There opining fweets, and eviry fragrant flow'r Luxuriant smile, a never-fading bow'r. Next human follies kindly to expose, You change from numbers, but not fink in profe: Whether in visionary scenes you play, Refine our tastes, or laugh our crimes away. Now, by the bulkin'd muse you shine confest, The patriot kindles in the poet's breaft. Such energy of fense might pleasure raile, Tho' unembelish'd with the charms of phrase: Such charms of phrase would with success be crown'd, The' nonfense flow'd in the melodious sound. The chastest virgin needs no blushes fear, The learn d themselves, not uninstructed, hear. The libertine, in pleasures us'd to roul, And idly sport with an immortal foul, Here comes, and by the virtuous heathen taught. Turns pale, and trembles at the dreadful thought. Whene'er you traverse vast Numidia's plains,

When luggish Briton in his isle remains?
When Juba seeks the tiger with delight,
We beat the thicket, and provoke the sight.
By the description warm'd, we fondly sweat,
And in the chilling East wind pant with heat,
What eyes behold not, how the stream refines,
'Till by degrees the floating mirrour shines?
While hurricanes in circling eddies play,
Tear up the sands, and sweep whole plains away.
We shrink with horrour, and confess our fear,
And all the sudden sounding ruin hear.
When purple robes, distain d with blood, deceive,
And make poor MARCIA beautifully grieve.

When she her secret thoughts no more conceals,
Forgets the woman, and her slame reveals,
Well may the Prince exult with noble pride,
Not for his Libyan crown, but Roman bride.

But I in vain on fingle features dwell,
While all the parts of the fair piece excel,
So rich the store, so dubious is the feast,
We know not, which to pass, or which to tast.
The shining incidents so justly fall.
We may the whole, new scenes of transport call.
Thus jewellers confound our wand'ring eyes,
And with variety of gems surprise.
Here saphires, here the sardian stone is seen,
The topaz yellow, and the jasper green,
The costly brilliant there, confus'dly bright
From num'rous surfaces darts trembling light.,
The diff'rent colours mingling in a blaze,
Silent we stand, unable where to praise,
In pleasure sweetly lost ten thousand ways.

Trinity-college, Cambridge, L. EUSDEN.

And funk to fostness all our tragic rage:
By that alone did empires fall or rise,
And fate depended on a fair one's eyes:
The sweet infection, mixt with dang'rous art;
Debas'd our manhood, while it footh'd the heart,
You scorn to raise a grief thy self must blame,
Nor from our weakness steal a vulgar fame:
A patriot's fall may justly melt the mind,
And sears flow nobly, shed for all mankind.

How do our fouls with gen'rous pleafure glow! Our hearts exulting, while our eyes o'erflow, When thy firm hero stands beneath the weight Of all his suff'rings venerably great; Rome's poor remains shill shelt'ring by his side, With conscious virtue, and becoming pride.

The aged oak thus rears his head in air,

His sap exhausted, and his branches bare,

'Midst storms and earthquakes, he maintains his state,

Bixt deep in earth, and fastn'd by his weight:

His naked boughs still lend the shepherds aid,

And his old trunk projects an awful shade.

Amidst the joys triumphant peace bestows,
Our patriots sadden at his glorious woes,
A while they let the world's great business wait,
Anxious for Rome, and sigh for CATO's fate.
Here taught how ancient heroes rose to same,
Our Britons crowd, and catch the Roman slame,
Where states and senates well might lend an ear,
And kings and priests without a blush appear.

France boalts no more, but fearful to engage. Now first pays homage to her rival's stage, Hastes to learn thee, and learning shall submit Alike to British arms, and British wit: No more she'll wonder (forc'd to do us right) Who think like Romans, could like Romans fights Thy Oxford fmiles this glorious work to fee, And fondly triumphs in a fon like thee. The fenates, confuls, and the gods of Rome, Like old acquaintance at their native home, In thee we find: each deed, each word exprest: And ev'ry thought that swell'd a Roman breaft; We trace each hint that could thy foul inspire With Virgil's judgment, and with Lucan's fire: We know thy worth, and give us leave to boaft, We must admire, because we know thee most,

Yet with fuch wond'rous art your skilful hand Does all the passions of the soul command, That e'en my grief to praise and wonder turn'd. And envy'd the great death which first 1 mourn'd,

What pen but yours could draw the doubtful strife, Of honour struggling with the love of life? Describe the patriot obstinately good, As hov'ring o'er eternity he stood: The wide, th' unbounded ocean lay before His piercing fight, and heav'n the distant shore. Secure of endless bliss, with fearless eyes, He grafps the dagger, and its point defies, And rushes out of life to fnatch the glorious prize.

How would old Rome rejoice, to hear you tell How just her patriot liv'd, how great he fell ! Recount his wond'rous probity and truth, And form new Juba's i the British youth. Their gen'rous fouls, when he refigns his breath, Are pleas'd with ruin, and in love with death; And when her conqu'ring sword Britannia draws, Resolve to perish, or defend her cause. Now first on Albion's theatre we see, A perfect image of what man should be; The glorious character is now exprest, Of virtue dwelling in a human breaft, Drawn at full length by your immortal lines, In Cato's foul, as in her heav'n, she shines. All fouls college. DIGBY COTES.

Left with the PRINTER by an unknown Hand.

OW we may speak, since Cato speaks no more; 'Tis praise at length, 'twas rapture all before; When crowded theatres with los rung Sent to the fkies, from whence thy penius forung: Ev'n civil rage a while in thine was loft: And factions strove but to applaud thee most;

Nor could enjoyment pall our longing taffe; But ev'ry night was dearer than the last.

As when old Rome, in a malignant hour.

Depriv'd of some returning conqueror,
Her debt of triumph to the dead discharg'd,
For same, for treasure, and her bounds enlarg'd:
And while his godlike figure mov'd along,
Alternate passions fir'd th' adoring throng;
Tears flow'd from ev'ry eye, and shouts from ev'ry tongue.
So in thy pompous lines has Cato far'd,
Grac'd with an ample though a late reward:
A greater victor we in him revere;
A nobler triumph crowns his image here.

With wonder, as with pleasure, we survey.

A theme so scarty wrought into a play;
So vast a pile on such toundations plac'd;
Like Ammon's temple rear'd on Libya's waste:
Behold its glowing paint! its easy weight!
Its nice proportions! and stupendious height!
How chast the conduct! how divine the rage!

A Roman worthy on a Grecian stage!

But where shall Cato's praise begin or end; Inclin'd to melt, and yet untaught to bend, The sirmest patriot, and the gentlest friend? How great his genius, when the traitor crowd Ready to strike the blow their fury vow'd; Quell'd by his look and list'ning to his lore, Learn, like his passions, to rebel no more! When, lavish of his boiling blood, to prove The cure of slavish life, and slighted love, Brave Marcus now in early death appears, While Cato counts his wounds, and not his years; Who, checking private grief, the publick mourns, Commands the pity he so greatly scorns. But when he strikes (to crown his generous part)

The dying Roman shames the pomp of death.
O sacred freedom, which the powers bestow
To season blessings, and to soften wee:

That honest, staunch, impracticable heart; No tears, no sobs pursue his parting breath:

O wake the foul by tender strokes of art. To raise the genius, and to mend the heart. To make mankind in conscious virtue bold, Live o'er each scene, and be what they behold: For this the tragic muse first trod the stage, Commanding tears to Itream thro' ev'ry age; Tyrants no more their favage nature kept, And foes to virtue wonder'd how they wept. Our author shuns by vulgar springs to move The hero's glory or the virgin's love; In pitying love we but our weakness shew, And wild ambition well deferves its woe. Here tears shall flow from a more gen'rous cause, Such tears as parriots fled for dying laws: He bids your breafts with ancient ardour rife, And calls forth Roman drops from British eyes. Virtue confes'd in human shape he draws, What Plate thought, and god-like Cate was: No common object to your fight displays, But what with pleasure heav'n itself surveys; A brave man flruggling in the storms of fate. And greatly falling with a falling state! While Cato gives his little fenate laws, What bosom beats not in his country's cause? Who fees him act, but envies ev'ry deed? Who hears him groan, and does not wish to bleed? Ev'n when proud Cæfar 'midit triumphal cars, The spoils of nations, and the pomp of wars, Ignobly vain, and impotently great, Shew'd Rome her Cato's figure drawn in state,

As her dead father's rev'rend image past,
The pomp was darken'd, and the day o'ercast,
The triumph ceas'd—tears gush'd from ev'ry eye,
The world's great victor pass'd unheeded by;
Her last good man dejected Rome ador'd,
And honour'd Cæsar's less than Cato's sword.

Britons attend: be worth like this approv'd,
And shew you have the virtue to be mov'd.
With honest scorn the first sam'd Cato view'd
Rome learning arts from Greece, whom she subdu'd:
Our scene precariously subsists too long
On French translation and Italian song.
Dare to have sense yourselves; affert the stage,
Be justly warm'd with your own native rage,
Such plays alone should please a British ear,
As Cato's self had not disdain'd to hear.

The dawn is over-cast, the morning low'rs.

And heavily in clouds brings on the day.

The great, th' important day, big with the fate

Of Cato and of Rome—our father's death

Would fill up all the guilt of civil war,

And close the scene of blood. Already Cæsar

Has ravish'd more than half the globe, and sees

Mankind grown thin by his destructive sword:

Should he go further, numbers would be wanting.

To form new battles, and support his crimes.

Ye gods, what havock does ambition make.

Among your works!

Por. Believe me, Marcus, 'tis an impious greatness, And mix'd with too much horror to be envy'd:

How does the luttre of our father's actions,

Through the dark cloud or ills that cover him,

Break out and burn with more triumphant brightness!

His suff'rings shine, and spread a glory round him;

Greatly

Greatly unfortunate, he fights the cause of honour, virtue, liberty and Rome. His sword ne'er fell but on the guilty head; Oppression, tyranny, and power usurp'd, Draw all the vengeance of his arm upon 'em.

Marc. Who knows not this! But what can Cato de Against a world, a base degen'rate world,
That courts the yoke, and bows the neck to Cæsar?
Pent up in Utica, he vainly forms
A poor epitome of Roman greatness,
And, cover'd with Numidian guards, directs
A seeble army, and an empty senate,
Remnants of mighty battles fought in vain.
By heav'ns such virtues, join'd with such success,
Distract my very soul: our father's fortune
Would almost tempt us to renounce his precepts.

Por. Remember what our father oft has told us: The ways of heav'n are dark and intricate; Puzzled in mazes, and perplex'd with errors; Our understanding traces 'em in vain, Lost and bewilder'd in the fruitless search; Nor sees with how much art the windings run, Nor where the regular consusion ends.

Marc. These are suggestions of a mind at ease:
Oh Portius, didst thou taste but half the griefs
That wring my foul, thou cou'dst not talk thus coldly:
Passion unpity'd, and successless love,
Plant daggers in my heart, and aggravate
My other griefs. Were but my Lucia kind!

Por. Thou feelt not that thy brother is thy rival:
But I must hide it, for I know thy temper.

[Aside.

Now, Marcus, now, thy virtue's on the proof:
Put forth thy utmost strength, work ev'ry nerve,
And call up all thy father in thy soul.
To quell the tyrant love, and guard thy heart
On this weak side, where most our nature fails,
Would be a conquest worthy Cato's son.

Marc. Portius, the counsel which I cannot take, Instead of healing but upbraids my weakness. Bid me for honour plunge into a war

Of thickest foes, and rush on certain death,
Then shalt thou see that Marcus is not slow
To follow glory, and confess his father.
Love is not to be reason'd down, or lost
In high ambition or a thirst of greatness;
'Tis second life, it grows into the soul,
Warms ev'ry vein, and beats in ev'ry pulse,
I feel it here: my resolution melts—

Por. Behold young Juba, the Numidian prince? With how much care he forms himself to glory, And breaks the sierceness of his native temper. To copy out our father's bright example. He loves our sister Marcia, greatly loves her, His eyes, his looks, his actions all betray it: But still the smother'd fondness burns within him. When most it swells, and labours for a vent, The sense of honour and desire of same. Drive the big passion back into his heart. What! shall an African, shall Juba's heir Reproach great Cato's son, and shew the world. A virtue wanting in a Roman soul?

Mar. Portius no more! your words leave stings behind 'em, When-e'er did Juba, or did Portius, shew A virtue that has cast me at a distance, And thrown me out in the pursuits of honour!

Por. Marcus, I know thy gen'rous temper well; Fling but th' appearance of dishonour on it, It straight takes fire and mounts into a blaze.

Marc A brother's suff'rings claim a brother's pity.

Por. Heav'n knows I pity thee: behold my eyes

Ev'n whilst I speak—do they not swim in tears?
Were but my heart as naked to thy view,
Marcus would see it bleed in his behalf.

Marc. Why then dost treat me with rebukes, inflead Of kind condoling cares, and friendly forrow!

Por. O Marcus, did I know the way to eafe. Thy troubled heart, and mitigate thy pains, Marcus, believe me, I could die to do it.

Marc. Thou best of brothers, and thou best of friends!

ENTER SEMPRONIUS.

SEMPRONIUS.

Onspiracies no sooner shou'd be form'd
Than executed. What means Portius here!
I like not that cold youth, I must dissemble,
And speak a language foreign to my heart.

[Aside.

SEMPRONIUS, PORTIUS.

Good morrow Portius! let us once embrace; Once more embrace, while yet we both are free; To-morrow shou'd we thus express our friendship, Each might receive a flave into his arms: This sun perhaps, this morning sun's the last, That e'er shall rise on Roman liberty.

Por. My father has this morning call'd together To this poor hall his little Roman senate, (The leavings of Pharsalia) to consult If yet he can oppose the mighty torrent That bears down Rome, and all her gods, before it, Or must at length give up the world to Cæsar.

Semp. Not all the pomp and majesty of Rome Can raise her senate more than Cato's presence. His virtues render our assembly awful, They strike with something like religious sear, And make even Cæsar tremble at the head Of armies slush d with conquest. O my Portius, Could I but call that wond'rous man my father, Wou'd but thy sister Marcia be propitious To thy friend's vows, I might be bles'd indeed!

Port. Alas! Sempronius, would'st thou talk of love To Marcia, whilst her father's life's in danger? Thou might'st as well court the pale trembling vestal, When she beholds the holy stame expiring.

Semp.

Semp. The more I fee the wonders of thy race,
The more I'm charm'd, thou must take heed my Portius!
The world has all its eyes on Cato's son.
Thy father's merit sets thee up to view,
And shews thee in the fairest point of light,
To make thy virtues, or thy faults, conspicuous.

Por. Well dost thou seem to check my lingring here
On this important hour—I'll straight away,
And while the fathers of the senate meet
In close debate to weigh th' events of war,
I'll animate the soldiers drooping courage,
With love of freedom, and contempt of life:
I'll thunder in their ears their country's cause,
And try to rouse up all that's Roman in 'em.
'Tis not in mortals to command success,
But we'll do more, Sempronius; we'll deserve it. [Exit.]

SEMPRONIUS folus.

Curse on the stripling! how he ape's his fire?

Ambitiously fententious! —— But I wonder
Old Syphax comes not; his Numidian genius
Is well disposed to mischief, were he prompt
And eager on it, but he must be spurr'd,
And ev'ry moment quickned to the course.
—— Cato has us'd me ill: he has resused
His daughter Marcia to my ardent vows.
Besides, his bassled arms and ruin'd cause
Are barrs to my ambition. Cesar's favour,
That show'rs down greatness on his sriends, will raise me
To Rome's first honours. If I give up Cato,
I claim in my reward his captive daughter.
But Syphax comes!——

Complain aloud of Cato's discipline,

And wait but the command to change their master,

Semp. Believe me, Syphax, there's no time to waste;
Even whilst we speak our conqueror comes on,
And gathers ground upon us ev'ry moment.
Alas! thou know'st not Cæsar's active soul,
With what a dreadful course he rushes on
From war to war. In vain has nature form'd
Mountains and oceans to oppose his passage;
He bounds o'er all, victorious in his march;
The Alps and Pyreneans sink before him,
Through winds and waves, and storms he works his way,
Impatient for the battle: one day more
Will set the victor thund'ring at our gates.
But tell me, hast thou yet drawn o'er young Juba?
That still would recommend thee more to Cæsar,

And challenge better terms.

Syph. Alas! he's lost,

He's lost, Sempronius; all his thoughts are full

Of Cato's virtues—but I'll try once more

(For ev'ry instant I expect him here,)

If yet I can subdue those stubboun principles

Of faith, of honour, and I know not what,

That have corrupted his Numidian temper,

And struck th' insection into all his soul.

Semp. Be fure to press upon him ev'ry motive. Juba's surrender, since his father's death, Would give up Africk into Cæsar's hands, And make him Lord of half the burning zone.

Syph But is it true, Sempronius, that your senate Is call'd together? Gods! thou must be cautious!... Cato has piercing eyes, and will discern Our frauds, unless they're cover'd thick with art.

Semp. Let me alone, good Syphax, I'll conceal My thoughts in passion ('tis the surest way;).

I'll bellow out for Rome, and for my country,
And mouth at Casar 'till I shake the senate.

SYPHAX folus.

I'll try if yet I can reduce to reason This headstrong youth, and make him fourn at Cato. The time is short, Cæsar comes rushing on us-But hold! young Juba fees me, and approaches,

SCENE IV.

JUBA, SYPHAX.

TUBA.

C Yphax, I joy to meet thee thus alone. I have observed of late thy looks are fall'n. O'ercast with gloomy cares and discontent; Then tell me, Syphax, I conjure thee tell me, What are the thoughts that knit thy brow in frowns, And turn thine eye thus coldly on thy Prince?

Sypb. 'Tis not my talent to conceal my thoughts, Or carry fmiles and fun-shine in my face, When discontent sits heavy at my heart. I have not yet so much the Roman in me.

Jub. Why dost thou cast out such ungen'rous terms Against the lords and sov'reigns of the world?

Doft

Dost thou not see mankind fall down before them, And own the force of their superior virtue? Is there a nation in the wilds of Africk, Amidst our barren rocks, and burning fands, That does not tremble at the Roman name?

Syph. Gods! where's the worth that fets this people up Above your own Numidia's tawny fons!

Do they with tougher finews bend the bow?

Or flies the jav'lin fwifter to its mark,

Launch'd from the vigour of a Roman arm!

Who like our active African instructs

The fiery steed, and trains him to his hand?

Or guides in troops th' embattled elephant,

Loaden with war? These, these are arts my Prince.

In which your Zama does not stoop to Rome.

Jub. These all are virtues of a meaner rank,
Persections that are plac'd in bones and nerves.
A Roman soul is bent on higher views:
To civilize the rude unpolish'd world,
And lay it under the restraint of laws;
To make man mild and sociable to man;
To cultivate the wild licentious savage
With wisdom, discipline, and libral arts;
Th' embellishments of life: virtues like these,
Make human nature shine, reform the soul,
And break our sierce barbarians into men.

Syph. Patience kind heav'ns!—excuse an old man's warmth. What are these wond'rous civilizing arts,
This Roman polish, and this smooth behaviour.
That render man thus tractable and tame?
Are they not only to disguise our passions,
To set our looks at variance with our thoughts,
To check the starts and sallies of the soul,
And break off all its commerce with the tongue;
In short, to change us into other creatures,
Than what our nature and the gods design'd us?

Jub. To strike thee dumb: turn up thy eyes to Cate!
There may't thou see to what a godlike height
The Roman virtues lift up mortal man,
While good, and just, and anxious for his friends

He's still severely bent against himself: Renouncing sleep, and rest, and food, and ease, He strives with thirst and hunger, toil and heat, And when his fortune lets before him all The pomps and pleasures that his foul can wish, His rigid virtue will accept of none.

Syph. Believe me, Prince, there's not an African That traverses our vast Numidian defarts, In quest of prey, and lives upon his bow, But better practifes these boasted virtues. Coarse are his meals, the fortune of the chase, Amidst the running stream he slakes his thirst. Toils all the day, and at th' approach of night On the first friendly bank he throws him down, Or rests his head upon a rock 'till morn : Then riles fresh, pursues his wonted game, And if the following day he chance to find A new repalt, or an untafted fpring, Bleffes his stars, and thinks it luxury.

7ub. Thy prejudices, Syphax, wont discern What virtues grow from ignorance and choice, Nor how the hero differs from the brute. But grant that others cou'd with equal glory Look down on pleasures, and the baits of sense: Where shall we find the man that bears affliction, Great and majestick in his griefs like Cato? Heav'ns! with what strength, what steadiness of mind, He triumphs in the midft of all his fuff'rings! How does he rife against a load of woes, And thank the gods that throw the weight upon him !

Syph. 'Tis pride, rank pride, and haughtiness of soul; I think the Romans call it stoicism. Had not your royal father thought fo highly

Of Roman virtue, and of Cato's cause, He had not fall'n by a flave's hand inglorious: Nor would his flaughter'd army now have lain On Africk fands disfigur'd with their wounds. To gorge the wolves and vultures of Numidia.

Jub. Why dost thou call my forrows up afresh?

My father's name brings tears into my eyes.

Syph. Oh, that you'd profit by your father's ills? Jub. What wou d'st thou have me do? Syph. Abandon Cato.

Jub. Syphax, I should be more than twice an orphan

By fuch a lofs.

Syph. Ay, there's the tie that binds you! You long to call him father, Marcia's charms. Work in your heart unfeen and plead for Cato. No wonder you are deaf to all I fay.

Jub. Syphax, your zeal becomes importunate; I've hitherto permitted it to rave,

And talk at large; but learn to keep it in,

Lest it should take more freedom than I'll give it.

Syph. Sir, your great father never us'd me thus. Alas, he's dead! but can you e'er forget
The tender forrow and the pangs of nature,
The fond embraces, and repeated bleffings,
Which you drew from him in your last farewel?
Still must I cherish the dear, sad, remembrance,
At once to torture, and to please my soul.
The good old king at parting wrung my hand,
(His eyes brim-full of tears) then sighing cry'd,
Pr'ythee be careful of my son!—his grief
Swell'd up so high he could not utter more.

Jub. Alas the story melts away my foul.

That best of father's! how shall I discharge.

The gratitude and duty which I owe him!

Syph. By laying up his counsels in your heart.

Jub. His counsels bade me yield to thy directions:
Then, Syphax, chide me in severest terms,
Vent all thy passions, and I il stand its shock,
Calm and unrussed as a summer sea,
When not a breath of wind slies o'er its surface.

Syph. Alas, my Prince, I'd guide you to your fafety. Jub. I do believe thou wou'dst; but tell me how? Syph. Fly from the fate that follows Cælar's foes.

Jub. My father fcorn d to do it.

Syph. Rather fay your love.

Jub. Syphax, I've promis'd to preserve my temper, Why wilt thou urge me to confess a flame, I long have stifled, and wou'd fain conceal?

Syph Believe me, Prince, tho' hard to conquer love,
'Tis easy to divert and break its force:
Absence might cure it, or a second mistress
Light up another slame, and put out this.
The glowing dames of Zama's royal court
Have faces slusht with more exasted charms;
The sun that rolls his chariot o'er their heads,
Works up more sire and colour in their cheeks:
Were you with these, my Prince, you'd soon forget
The pale, unripen'd, beauties of the North.

Jub. 'Tis not a set of features, or complexion,
The tincture of a skin that I admire.
Beauty soon grows familiar to the lover,
Fades in his eye, and palls upon the sense.
The virtuous Marcia tow'rs above her sex:
True, she is fair, (Oh, how divinely fair!)
But still the lovely maid improves her charms,
With inward greatness, unaffected wisdom,
And sanctity of manners Cato's soul
Shines out in ev'ry thing she acts or speaks,
While winning mildness and attractive smiles
Dwell in her looks, and with becoming grace
Sosten the rigour of her father's virtues.

Syph. How does your tongue grow wanton in her praise!

But on my knees I beg you would consider—

Enter MARCIA and LUCIA.

Jub. Hah! Syphax, is't not she!—she moves this way: And with her Lucia, Lucius's fair daughter. My heart beats thick—I proythee, Syphax, leave me.

Syph. Ten thousand curses tasten on 'em both!

Now will this woman with a single glance

Undo what I've been lab'ring all this while.

Mar. My pray'rs and wishes always shall attend The friends of Rome, the glorious cause of virtue, And men approv d of by the gods and Cato.

Jub. That Juba may deferve thy pious cares, I'll gaze for ever on thy godlike father, Transplanting, one by one, into my life His bright persections, 'till I shine like him,

MARCIA, you're too fevere:

How cou'd you chide the young good natur'd Prince,

And drive him from you with fo ftern an air.

A Prince that loves and dotes on you to death!

Mar. 'Tis therefore, Lucia, that I chide him from me. His air, his voice, his looks, his honest foul Speak all so movingly in his behalf, I dare not trust myself to hear him talk.

Luc. Why will you fight against so sweet a passion, And steel your heart to such a world of charms?

Mar. How, Lucia, wou'dst then have me sink away
In pleasing dreams, and lose myself in love,
When every moment Cato's life's at stake?
Cæsar comes arm'd with terror and revenge,
And aims his thunder at my father's head;
Shou'd not the sad occasion swallow up
My other cares, and draw them all into it?

Luc. Why have not I this constancy of mind. Who have so many griess to try its force? Sure, nature form'd me of her softest mould, Enseebled all my soul with tender passions, And sunk me ev'n below mine own weak sex: Pity, and love, by turns oppress my heart.

Mar. Lucia, disburden all thy cares on me, And let me share thy most retir'd distress; Tell me who raises up this consuct in thee?

Luc. I need not blosh to name them, when I tell thee They're Marcia's brothers, and the sons of Cato.

Mar. They both behold thee with their sister's eyes: And often have reveal'd their passion to me.

Luc. Which is it Marcia wishes for?

Mar. For neither————

And yet for both—the youths have equal share In Marcia's wishes, and divide their sister: But tell me, which of them is Lucia's choice?

Luc. Marcia, they both are high in my esteem, But in my love—why wist thou make me name him? Thou know'st it is a blind, and foolish passion, Pleas'd, and disgusted with it knows not what———

Mar. O Lucia, I'm perplex d, O tell me which

I must hereaster call my happy brother?

Luc Suppose 'twere Portius could you blame my choice?

O Portius thou halt stol'n away my soul!

With what a graceful tenderness he loves!

And breaths the softest, the sincerest vows!

Complacency, and truth, and manly sweetness

Dwell ever on his tongue, and smooth his thoughts.

Marcus is over-warm, his sond complaints

Have so much earnestness and passion in them,

I hear him with a secret kind of horror,

And tremble at his vehemence of temper.

Mar. Alas, poor youth! how canst thou throw him from

Lucia, thou know'st not half the love he bears thee? Whene'er he speaks of thee, his heart's in stames, He sends out all his soul in ev'ry word, And thinks, and talks, and looks like one transported. Unhappy youth! how will thy coldness raise Tempests and storms in his afflicted bosom! I dread the consequence.

Against your brother Portius.

Mar. Heav'n forbid!

Had Portius been the unsuccessful lover, The same compassion wou'd have fall'n on him.

Mar. Let us not, Lucia, aggravate our forrows, But to the gods permit th' event of things. Our lives, discolour'd with our present woes, May still grow bright, and smile with happier hours.

May all the guardian gods of Rome direct him!

Enter CATO.

Cato. Fathers, we once again are met in council: Cæsar's approach has summon'd us together, And Rome attends her fate from our resolves: How shall we treat this bold aspiring man? Success still follows him, and backs his crimes: Pharfalia gave him Rome, Egypt has fince Receiv'd his yoke, and the whole Nile is Cafar's Why should I mention Juba's overthrow, And Scipio's death? Numidia's burning fands Still smoke with blood. 'Tis time we should decree What cou fe to take. Our foe advances on us. And envies us even Lybia's fultry defarts. Fathers, Pronouce your thoughts, are they still fixt To hold it out, and fight it to the last? Or are your hearts fubdu'd at length, and wrought By time, and ill fuccess to a submission? Sempronius, speak.

Semp. My voice is still for war.

Gods, can a Roman senate long debate
Which of the two to choose, slaviry or death!

No, let us rise at once, gird on our swords,
And at the head of our remaining troops,
Attack the foe, break through the hick array

Of his throng'd legions, and charge home upon him.

Perhaps

Perhaps some arm, more lucky then the rest,
May reach his heart, and tree the world from bondage.
Rise, fathers, rise! 'tis Rome demands your help;
Rise and revenge her slaughter'd citizens,
Or share their fate! the corps of half her senate
Manure the fields of Thessay, while we Sit here delib'rating in cold debates,
If we should facrisice our lives to honour,
Or wear them out in servitude and chains.
Rouse up for shame! our brothers of Pharsalia
Point at their wounds, and cry aloud — To bartle!
Great Pompey's shade complains that we are slow,
And Scipio's ghost walks unreveng'd amongst us!

Cato. Let not a torrent of impetuous zeal
Transport thee thus beyond the bounds of reason:
True fortitude is seen in great exploits
That justice warrants, and that wisdom guides;
All else is tow'ring frenzy and distraction.
Are not the lives of those who draw the sword
In Rome's defence intrusted to our care?
Should we thus lead them to a field of slaughter,
Might not th' impartial world with reason say,
We lavish'd at our deaths the blood of thousands,
To grace our fall, and make our ruin glorious?
Lucius, we next would know what's your opinion.

Luc. My thoughts, I must confess, are turn'd on peace. Already have our quarrels fill'd the world
With widows, and with orphans: Scythia mourns
Our guilty wars, and earth's remotest regions
Lie half unpeopled by the feud's of Rome:
'Tis time to sheath the sword, and spare mankind.
It is not Cæsar, but the gods, my fathers,
The gods declare against us, and repel
Our vain attempts. To urge the foe to battle,
(Prompted by blind revenge and wild despair)
Were to refuse th' awards of providence,
And not to rest in heav'n's determination.
Already have we shewn our love to Rome,
Now let us shew submission to the gods.
We took up arms, not to revenge ourselves,

But free the commonwealth; when this end fails,
Arms have no further use: our country's cause,
That drew our swords now wrests 'em from our hands,
And bids us not delight in Roman blood,
Unprositably shed; what men could do
Is done already: heav'n and earth will witness,
If Rome must fall, that we are innocent.

Semp This smooth discourse, and mild behaviour oft Conceal a traitor—Something whispers me All is not right—Cato, beware of Lucius. [Aside to Cato.]

Cato. Let us appear nor rash nor diffident: Immod'rate valour swells into a fault: And fear admitted into publick councils, Berrays like treason. Let us shun'em both, Fathers, I cannot see that our affairs Are grown thus desp'rate, we have bulwarks round us: Within our walls are troops enured to toil In Africk's heats, and feafon'd to the fun: Numidia's spacious kingdom lies behind us, Ready to rife at its young Prince's call. While there is hope do not distrust the gods: But wait at least till Cæsars near approach Force us to yield. 'Twill never be too late To fue for chains, and own a conqueror. Why should Rome fall a moment ere her time? No. let us draw her term of freedom out To its full length, and spin it to the last, So thall we gain still one day's liberty; And let me perish, but in Cato's judgement A day, an hour of virtuous liberty Is worth a whole eternity in bondage.

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Fathers this moment, as I watch'd the gate, Lodg'd on my post, a herald is arriv'd From Cæsar's camp, and with him comes old Decius, The Roman knight; he carries in his looks Impatience, and demands to speak with Cato.

DECIUS.

Cato. Cou d he fend it
To Cato's flaughter'd friends, it would be welcome.

Are not your orders to address the fenate;

Dec. My business is with Cato; Cælar sees
The straits to which you're driven; and, as he knows
Cato's high worth, is anxious for your life.

Cato. My life is grafted on the fate of Rome:
Wou'd he fave Cato? Bid him spare his country.
Tell your dictator this: and tell him, Cato
Disdains a life, which he has power to offer.

Dec. Rome and her fenators submit to Cæsar; Her gen'rals and her consuls are no more, Who check'd his conquests, and denied his triumphs, Why will not Cato be this Cæsar's friend?

Cato. Those very reasons thou hast urged, forbid it.

Dec. Cato, I've orders to expostulate,
And reason with you, as from friend to friend;
Think on the storm that gathers o'er your head,
And threatens ev'ry hour to burst upon it;
Still may you stand high in your country's honours;
Do but comply, and make your peace with Cæsar,
Rome will rejoice, and cast its eyes on Cato,
As on the second of mankind.

Cato. No more:

I must not think of life on such conditions.

Dec. Cæfar is well acquinted with your virtues, And therfore fets this value on your life: Let him but know the price of Cato's friendship, And name your terms, Cato. Bid him disband his legions,
Restore the commonwealth to liberty,
Submit his actions to the publick censure,
And stand the judgement of a Roman senate:
Bid him do this, and Cato is his friend.

Dec. Cato, the world talks loudly of your wisdom— Cato. Nay more, the Cato's voice was ne'er employ'd To clear the guilty, and to varnish crimes,

Myself will mount the Rostrum in his favour, And strive to gain his pardon from the people.

Dec. A stile, like this, becomes a conqueror.

Cato. Decius, a stile like this, becomes a Roman.

Dec. What is a Roman, that is Cæsar's foe?

Cato. Greater then Cæfar: he's a friend to virtue.

Dec. Consider, Cato, you're in Utica,

And at the head of your own little fenate;

You don't now thunder in the capitol,

Cato. Let him confider that, who drives us hither?

'Tis Cæsar's sword has made Rome's senate little,
And thinn'd its ranks. Alas, thy dazzled eye
Beholds this man in a salse glaring light,
Which conquest and success have thrown upon him;
Did'st thou but view him right, thou'dst see him black.
With murder, treason, sacriledge, and crimes,
That strike my soul with horror but to name'em.
I know thou look'st on me, as on a wretch
Beset with ills, and cover'd with missortunes;
But by the gods I swear, millions of worlds.
Shou'd never buy me to be like that Cæsar.

Dec. Does Cato fend this answer back to Casfar, For all his gen'rous cares, and proffer'd friendship?

Cate. His cares for me are infolent and vain:
Prefumptuous man! the gods take case of Cato.
Wou'd Cæfar shew the greatness of his soul?
Bid him employ his care for these my friends.
And make good use of his ill gotten pow'r,
By sheltring men much better than himself.

SEMPRONIUS, LUCIUS, CATO

SEMPRONIUS.

CATO, we thank thee,
The mighty genius of immortal Rome
Speaks in thy voice; thy foul breathes liberty.
Cæfar will firink to hear the words thou utter'st,
And shudder in the midst of all his conquests.

Luc. The fenate owns its gratitude to Cato, Who with fo great a foul confults its fafety, And guards our lives, while he neglects his own.

Semp. Sempronius gives no thanks on this account. Lucius feems fond of life, but what is life? 'Tis not to stalk about, and draw fresh air From time to time, or gaze upon the fun; 'Tis to be free. When liberty is gone, Life grows inspid and has lost its relish. O cou'd my dying hand but lodge a sword In Cæsar's bosom, and revenge my country, By heav'ns I cou'd enjoy the pangs of death, And smile in agony.

Luc. Others, perhaps,
May serve their country with as warm a zeal,
Tho' 'tis not kindled into so much rage.

Semp. This fober conduct is a mighty virtue. In lukewarm patriots.

Cato. Come! no more, Sempronius.

All here are friends to Rome, and to each other:

Let us not weaken still the weaker side

By our divisions.

Luc. Cato, we all go into your opinion.

But

Cæsar's behaviour has convinc'd the senate We ought to hold it out 'till terms arrive.

Semp. We ought to hold it out 'till death; but, Cate.

My private voice is drown'd amid the fenate's.

Cato. Then let us rife, my friends, and strive to fill
This little interval, this pause of life,
(While yet our liberty and fates are doubtful)
With resolution, friendship, Roman bravery,
And all the virtues we can crowd into it;

SCENE IV.

CATO, JUBA,

CATO.

JUBA, the Roman senate has resolv'd,
'Till time give better prospects, still to keep
The sword unsheath'd, and turn its edge on Cæfar.

Jub. The resolution fits a Roman senate.

But, Cato, send me for a while thy patience,
And condescend to hear a young man speak.

My father, when some days before his death
He ordered me to march for Utica
(Alas, I thought not then his death so near!)

Wept o'er me, press me in his aged arms,
And as his griefs gave way, my son, said he,
Whatever fortune shall befal thy father,
Be Cato's friend; he'll train thee up to great
And virtuous deeds! do but observe him well,
Thou'lt shun missortunes, or thou'lt learn to bear 'em.

Cato. Juba, thy father was a worthy Prince,

And merited, alas! a better fate: But heav'n thought otherwise.

Jub. My father's fate, In spite of all the fortitude, that shines

Before

Before my face, in Cato's great example, Subdues my foul, and fills my eyes with tears.

Cato. It is an honest forrow, and becomes thee.

Jub. My father drew respect from foreign climes:
The kings of Africk sought him for their friend;
Kings far remote, that rule, as fame reports,
Behind the hidden sources of the Nile,
In distant worlds, on tother side the sun:
Oft have their black ambassadors appeared,
Loaden with gifts, and fill'd the courts of Zama.

Cato. I am no stranger to thy father's greatness.

Jub. I would not boast the greatness of my father,
But point out new alliances to Cato.

Had we not better leave this Utica,
To arm Numidia in our cause, and court
Th' affistance of my father's pow'rful friends?

Did they know Cato, our remotest kings

Wou'd pour embattled multitudes about him;
Their swarthy hosts wou'd darken all our plains,
Doubling the native horror of the war,
And making death more grim.

Cato. And canst thou think
Cato will fly before the sword of Cæsar!
Reduc'd like Hannibal to seek relief
From court to court, and wander up and down
A vagabond in Africk!

Jub. Cato, perhaps
I'm too officious, but my forward cares
Wou'd fain preferve a life of so much value,
My heart is wounded, when I see such virtue
Afflicted by the weight of such missfortunes.

Cato. Thy nobleness of soul obliges me.
But know, young Prince, that valour soars above
What the world calls missortune and affliction.
These are not ills; else wou'd they never fall
On heav'n's first fav'rites. and the best of men:
The gods, in bounty, work up storms about us,
That give mankind occasion to exert
Their hidden strength, and throw out into practice
Virtues which shun the day, and lie conceal'd

D

In the smooth seasons and the calms of life.

Jub. I'm charm'd'whene'er thou talk'it! I pant for virtue!

And all my foul endeavours at perfection.

Cato. Dost thou love watchings, abstinence and toil, Laborious virtues, all? learn them from Cato:

Success and fortune must thou learn from Cæsar.

Jub. The best good fortune that can fall on Juba; The whole success, at which my heart aspires, Depends on Cato.

Cato. What does Juba fay?

Thy words confound me.

Jub. I would fain retract them.

Give 'em me back again. They aim'd at nothing.

Cato. Tell me thy wish, young Prince; make not my ear.

A stranger to thy thoughts.

Jub. Oh, they're extravagant:

Still let me hide them.

Cato. What can Juba ask

That Cato will refuse!

Fub. I fear to name it.

Marcia - inherits all her father's virtues.

Cato. What wou'dst thou fay? Jub. Cato, thou hast a daughter.

Cato. Adieu, young Prince: I wou'd not hear a word Shou'd lessen thee in my esteem: remember

The hand of fate is over us, and heav'n

Exacts feverity from all our thoughts.

It is not now a time to talk of ought

But chains, or conquest; liberty, or death.

SCENE V.

SYPHAX, JUBA.

SYPHAX.

HOW's this, my Prince! What, cover'd with confusion?
You look as if you stern philosopher
Had just now chid you.

Jub.

He!

Jub. Syphax, I'm undone!
Syph. I know it well.

Jub. Cato thinks meanly of me.

Syph. And fo will all mankind.

Jub. I've opened to him

The weakness of my soul, my love for Marcia.

Syph. Cato's a proper person to intrust

A love-tale with.

Jub. Oh, I could pierce my heart,

My foolish heart! was ever wretch like Juba!

Syph. Alas, my Prince how are you chang'd of late! I've known young Juba rise before the sun,
To beat the thicket where the tiger slept,
Or feek the lion in his dreadful haunts:
How did the colour mount into your cheeks,
When first you rous'd him to the chase! I've seen you,
Ev'n in the Libyan dog-days, hunt him down,
Then charge him close, provoke him to the rage
Of sangs and claws, and stooping from your horse
Rivet the panting savage to the ground.

Jub. Pr'ythee, no more:

Syph. How would the old King fmile

To see you weigh the paws, when tipp'd with gold, And throw the shaggy spoils about your shoulders!

Jub. Syphax, this old man's talk (tho' honey flow'd In ev'ry word) wou'd now lose all its sweetness.

Cato's displeas'd, and Marcia lost for ever!

Syph. Young Prince, I yet cou'd give you good advice Marcia might (till be yours.

Jub. What faylt thou, Syphax?

By heav'ns thou turn'il me all into attention.

Syph. Marcia might still be yours.

Jub. As how, dear Syphax?

Syph. Juba commands Numidia's hardy troops, Mounted on fleeds, unus'd to the restraint Of curbs or bits, and fleeter than the winds: Give but the word, we'll seatch this damsel up, And bear off.

Jub Can such dishonest thoughts
Rise up in man! Wou'ast thou seduce my youth

To do an act that wou'd destroy my honour?

Syph Gods, I cou'd tear my beard to hear you talk! Honour's a fine imaginary notion,

That draws in raw and unexperienc'd men To real mischiefs, while they hunt a shadow.

Jub. Wouldst thou degrade thy Prince into a ruffian!

Syph. The boalted ancestors of these great men, Whose virtues you admire, were all such russians! This dread of nations, this almighty Rome, That comprehends in her wide empire's bounds. All under heav'n, was founded on a rape. Your Scipio's, Cæsars, Pompeys, and your Cato's, (These gods on earth) are all the spurious brood Of violated maids, of ravish'd Sabines.

Jub. Syphax, I fear that hoary head of thine

Abounds too much in our Numidian wiles.

Syph. Indeed, my Prince, you want to know the world. You have not read mankind, your youth admires The throws and swellings of a Roman soul, Cato's bold flights, th' extravagance of virtue.

Jub. If knowledge of the world makes man perfidious, May Juba ever live in ignorance!

Syph. Go, go, you're young. Jub. Gods, must I tamely bear

This arrogance unanswer'd! thou're a traitor,

A false old traitor.

Syph. I have gone too far.
Tub. Cato shall know the baseness of thy soul.

Syph. I must appease this storm or perish in it. [Aside. Young Prince, behold these locks that are grown white

Beneath a helmet in your father's battles.

Jub. Those locks shall ne'er protect thy insolence.

Syph. Must one rash word th' infirmity of age, Throw down the merit of my better years?

This the reward of a whole life of fervice!

-Curse on the boy! how steadily he hears me! [Aside.

Jub. Is it because the throne of my forefathers
Still stands unfill'd, and that Numidia's crown
Hangs doubtful yet, whose head it shall inclose,
Thou thus presum'st to treat thy Prince with scorn?

Syph.

Syph. Why will you rive my heart with such expressions? Does not old Syphax follow you to war? What are his aims? Why does he load with darts His trembling hand, and crush beneath a cask His wrinkled brows? What is it he aspires to? Is it not this? to shed the slow remains, His last poor ebb of blood in your defence?

Jub. Syphax, no more! I would not hear you talk.

Syph. Not hear me talk! what, when my faith to Juba,
My royal master's son, is call'd-in question?

My prince may strike me dead, and I'd be dumb:
But whilst I live I must not hold my tongue,
And languish out old age in his displeasure.

Jub. Thou know'st the way too well into my heart,

I do believe thee loyal to thy Prince.

Syph. What greater instance can I give? I've offer'd To do an action, which my foul abhors, And gain you whom you love at any price.

Jub. Was this thy motive? I have been too hasty. Syph. And 'tis for this my Prince has call'd me traitor. Jub. Sure thou mistak's; I did not call thee so.

Syph. You did indeed, my Prince, you cail'd me traitor. Nay, further, threaten'd you'd complain to Cato. Of what, my Prince, wou'd you complain to Cato? That Syhax loves you, and wou'd facrifice. His life, nay more, his honour in your fervice

Jub. Syphax, I know thou lov's me; but indeed, Thy zeal for Juba carried thee too far. Honour's a facred tie, the law of kings, The noble mind's distinguishing perfection, That aids, and strengthens virtue, where it meets her, And imitates her actions, where she is not: It ought not to be sported with.

Syph By heav'ns
I'm ravish'd when you talk thus, tho' you chide me!
Alas, I've hitherto been used to think
A blind officious zeal to serve my King
The ruling principle, that ought to burn
And quench all others in a subject's neart.

Happy the people, who preserve their honour By the same duties, that oblige their Prince!

Jub Syphax, thou now begin'st to speak thyself. Numidia's grown a scorn among the nations For breach of publick vows. Our Punick faith Is infamous, and branded to a proverb. Syphax, we'll join our cares to purge away Our country's crimes, and clear her reputation.

Syph. Believe me, Prince, you make old Syphax weep, To hear you talk—but 'tis with tears of joy.

If e'er your father's crown adorn your brows,

Numidia will be blest by Cato's lectures.

Jub. Syphax thy hand! we'll mutually forget. The warmth of youth, and frowardness of age. Thy Prince esteems thy worth, and loves thy person, If e'er the scepter comes into my hand, Syphax shall stand the second in my kingdom.

Syph. Why will you overwhelm my age with kindness?

My joy grows burdenfome, I shan't support it.

Jub. Syphax, farewel! I'll hence, and try to find Some bleft occasion that may fet me right In Cato's thoughts. I'd rather have that man Approve my deeds, than worlds for my admirers. [Exit.

SYPHAX folus.

Young men soon give and soon forget affronts;
Old age is slow in both—— a salse old traitor!
Those words, rash boy, may chance to cost thee dear.
My heart had still some soolish fondness for thee:
But hence! 'tis gone: I give it to the winds:——
Cæsar, I'm wholly thine——

Semp. Syphax, we both were on the verge of fate:
Lucius declared for peace, and terms were offer'd
To Cato by a messenger from Cæsar.
Shou'd they submit, ere our designs are ripe,
We both must perish in the common wreck,
Lost in a gen'ral undistinguish'd ruin.

Syph. But how stands Cato?

Semp. Thou hast feen mount Atlas:
While storms and tempests thunder on its brows,
And oceans break their billows at its feet,
It stands unmoved, and glories in its height.
Such is that haughty man; his tow'ring foul,
'Midst all the shocks and injuries of fortune,
Rifes superior, and looks down on Cæsar.

Syph. But what's this meffenger?
Semp. I've practis'd with him,
And found a means to let the victor know
That Syphax and Sempronius are his friends.
But let me now examine in my turn:
Is Juba fixt?

fs?

Syph. Yes,—but it is to Cato.

I've try d the force of ev'ry reason on him,

Sooth'd and carefs'd, been angry, sooth'd again,

Laid safety, life, and int'rest in his sight.

But all are vain, he scorns them all for Cato.

Semp. Come, 'tis no matter, we shall do without him. He'll make a pretty figure in a triumph, And serve to trip before the victor's chariot. Syphax, I now may hope thou hast forlook. Thy Juba s cause, and wishest Marcia mine.

Syph. May she be thine as fast as thou would'st have her.

Semp. Syphax, I love that woman tho' I curse

Her and myself, yet spite of me I love her.

Syph. Make Cato sure, and give up Utica,
Cæsar will ne'er refuse thee such a trifle.
But are thy troops prepar'd for a revolt?
Do's the sedition catch from man to man,
And run among their ranks?

Semp. All, all is ready,

The

The factious leaders are our friends, that spread Murmurs and discontents among the soldiers.

They count their toilsome marches, long fatigues, Unusual fastings, and will bear no more.

This medly of philosophy and war.

Within an hour they'll storm the senate-house.

Syph. Mean while I'll draw up my Numidian troops
Within the square, to exercise their arms,
And, as I see occasion, favour thee.
I laugh to think how your unshaken Cato
Will look aghast, while unforeseen destruction.
Pours in upon him thus from every side.
So, where our wide Numidian wastes extend,
Sudden, th' impetuous hurricanes descend,
Wheel through the air, in circling eddies play,
Tear up the sands, and sweep whole plains away.
The helpless traveller, with wild surprise,
Sees the dry desert all around him rise

ACT III. SCENE I.

MARCUS, PORTIUS.

MARCUS

THANKS to my stars I have not rang'd about
The wilds of life, ere I could find a friend;
Nature first pointed out my Portius to me,
And early taught me, by her secret force,
To love thy person, ere I knew thy merit:
'Till what was instinct, grew up into friendship.

Por. Marcus, the friendships of the world are oft. Confed'racies in vice, or leagues of pleasure; Ours has severest virtue for its basis,

And such a friendship ends not but with life.

Marc. Portius, thou know'st my soul in all its weakness, Then pr'ythee spare me on its tender side; Indulge me but in love, my other passions. Shall rise and fall by virtue's nicest rules.

Por. When love's well-timed, 'tis not a fault to love. The strong, the brave, the virtuous and the wife. Sink in the soft captivity together.

I would not urge thee to dismiss thy passion, (I know 'twere vain) but to suppress its force, Till better times may make it look more grateful.

Marc. Alas I thou talk'st like one who never selt. Th' impatient throbs and longings of a soul, That pants, and reaches after distant good. A lover does not live by sulgar time:
Believe me, Portius, in my Lucia's absence Life hangs upon me, and becomes a burden; And yet, when I behold the charming maid, I'm ten-times more undone; while hope and fear, And grief, and rage, and love, rise up at once, And with variety of pain distract me.

Por. What can thy Portius do to give thee help?

Marc. Portius, thou oft enjoy'lt the fair one's prefence.

Then undertake my cause, and plead it to her

With

With all the strength and heat of eloquence
Praternal love and friendship can inspire.
Tell her thy brother languishes to death,
And sades away, and withers in his bloom;
That he forgets his sleep, and loathes his food,
That youth, and health, and war are joyless to him:
Describe his anxious days, and restless nights,
And all the torments that thou sees me suffer.

Por. Marcus I beg thee give me not an office,
That fuits with me fo ill. Thou know'st my temper.
Marc. Wilt thou behold me sinking in my woes?

And wilt thou not reach out a friendly arm, To raise me from amidst this plunge of forrows!

Por. Marcus, thou can'it not ask what I'd refuse.
But here believe me I've a thousand reasons—

Marc. I know thou'lt say my passion's out of season,
That Cato's great example and missortunes
Shou'd both conspire to drive it from my thoughts.
But what's all this to one who loves like me!
Oh Portius, Portius, from my soul I wish
Thou didst but know thyself what 'tis to love!
Then wou'dst thou pity and affist thy brother.

Por. What should I do! if I disclose my passion
Our friendship's at an end: if I conceal it,
The world will call me false to a friend and brother. [Aside.

Marc. But see where Lucia, at her wonted hour, Amid the cool of you high marble arch, Enjoys the noon day breeze! observe her, Portius! That face, that shape, those eyes, that heav'n of beauty! Observe her well, and blame me if thou can'st.

Por. She fees us and advances—

Marc. I'll withdraw

And leave you for a while. Remember, Portius,

Thy brother's life depends upon thy tongue. [Exit.

LUCIA, PORTIUS.

LUCIA.

DID not I fee your brother Marcus here!

Why did he fly the place, and shun my presence?

Por. Oh, Lucia, language is too faint to shew

His rage of love; it preys upon his life;

He pines, he sickens, he despairs, he dies:

His passions and his virtues lie consused,

And mixt together in so wild a tumult,

That the whole man is quite dissigur'd in him.

Heav'ns! would one think 'twere possible for love

To make such ravage in a noble soul!

Oh, Lucia, I'm distress'd! my heart bleeds for him;

And I'm unhappy, tho' thou smil'st upon me.

Luc. How wilt thou guard thy honour, in the shock Of love and friendship! think betimes, my Portius, Think how the nuptial tie that might ensure Our mutual bliss, would raise to such a height Thy brother's griefs, as might perhaps destroy him.

Por. Alas, poor youth! What dost thou think my Lucia! His gen'rous, open, undesigning heart Has begg'd his rival to solicit for him.

Then do not strike him dead with a denial,
But hold him up in life, and cheer his soul
With the faint glimm'ring of a doubtful hope:
Perhaps when we have pass'd these gloomy hours,
And weather'd out the storm that beats upon us—

Luc. No, Portius, no! I fee thy fifter's tears, Thy father's anguish, and thy brother's death, In the pursuit of our ill fated loves.

And, Portius, here I swear, to heav'n I swear, To heav'n, and all the pow'rs that judge mankind, Never to mix my plighted hands with thine,

Por. What half thou faid! I'm thunder-struct-recall

Those hasty words, or I am lost for ever.

Luc. Has not the vow already pass'd my lips? The gods have heard it and 'tis scal'd in heav'n, May all the vengeance, that was ever pour'd On perjur'd heads o'erwhelm me, if I break it!

Oh,

Por. Fixt in astonishment, I gaze upon thee; Like one just blasted by a stroke from heav'n, Who pants for breath, and stiffens, yet alive, In dreadful looks: a monument of wrath!

Luc. At length I've acted my severest part, I feel the woman breaking in upon me, And melt about my heart! my tears will flow, But oh I'll think no more! the hand of fate Has torn thee from me, and I must forget thee.

Por. Hard hearted, cruel maid!

Luc. Oh stop those founds,

Those killing founds? Why dost thou frown upon me? My blood runs cold, my heart forgets to heave, And life itself goes out at thy displeasure.

The gods fobid us to indulge our loves,
But oh! I cannot bear thy hate and live!

Por. Talk not of love, thou never knew'st its force. I've been deluded, led into a dream,
Of fancied bliss. O Lucia cruel maid!
Thy dreadful vow, loaden with death still sounds
In my stunn'd cars. What shall I say or do?
Quick, let us part! perdition's in thy presence,
And horror dwells about thee!—ha, she faints!
Wretch that I am! what has my rashness done!
Lucia, thou injur'd innocence! thou best
And lovelyest of thy sex! awake my Lucia,
Or Portius rushes on his sword to join thee.
—Her imprecations reach not to the tomb,
They shut not out society in death—

But

But hah! The moves! life wanders up and down Through all her face and lights up every charm.

Luc. O Portius, was this well!——to frown on her That lives upon thy fmiles! to call in doubt The faith of one expiring at thy feet, That loves thee more than ever woman lov'd! - What do I fay? my half-recover'd fenfe Forgets the vow in which my foul is bound. Destruction stands betwixt us! we must part.

Por. Name not the word, my frighted thoughts run back

Luc. What wouldst thou have me do? consider well The train of ills our love wou'd draw behind it. Think, Portius, think thou feeft thy dying brother Stabb'd at his heart, and all befmear'd with blood, Storming at heav'n and thee! thy awful fire Sternly demands the cause, th' accurfed cause, That robs him of his fon! poor Marcia rembles, Then tears her hair, and frantick in her griefs Calls out on Lucia! what could Lucia answer, Or how stand up in such a scene of sorrow?

Por. To my confusion and eternal grief, I must approve the sentence that destroys me. The mist that hung about my mind, clears up; And now, athwart the terorrs that thy vow Has planted round thee, thou appear it more fair, More amiable, and rifest in thy charms. Lovely'st of women! heav'n is in thy foul, Beauty and virtue shine for ever round thee, Bright'ning each other! thou art all divine!

Luc. Portius no more! thy words shoot thro' my heart, Melt my resolves, and turn me all to love. Why are those tears of fondness in thy eyes? Why heaves thy heart? Why fwells thy foul with forrow? It foftens me too much-farewel my Portius, Farewel, tho' death is in the word; for ever!

Por. Stay, Lucia, stay! what dost thou say? for ever! Luc. Have I not fworn? if, Portius, thy fuccels Must throw thy brother on his fate, farewel, Oh, how shall I repeat the word! for-ever!

Por. Thus o'er the dying lamp th' unsteady flame
Hangs quiv ring on a point, leaps off by fits,
And falls again, as loath to quit its hold:

— Thou must not go, my soul still hovers o'er thee,
And can't get loose.

Luc. If the firm Portius shake

To hear of parting, think what Lucia fuffers!

Por. 'Tis true; unruffled and serene I ve met The common accidents of life, but here Such an unlook'd for storm of ills falls on me, It beats down all my strength. I cannot bear it.

We must not part.

Luc. What dost thou say? Not part?

Hast thou forgot the vow that I have made?

Are there not heav'ns, and gods, and thunder, o'er us?

I sicken at the sight. Once more, farewel,

Farewel, and know thou wrong'st me, if thou think'st

Ever was love, or ever grief, like mine.

[Exit.]

SCENE III. MARCUS, PORTIUS.

MARCUS.

Portius, what hopes? How stands she? Am I doom'd To life or death?

Por. What would'st thou have me say?

Mar. What means this pensive posture? thou appear'st Like one amazed and terrified.

Por I've reason.

Marc. Thy down-cast looks, and thy disorder'd thoughts Tell me my fate. I ask not the success My cause has found.

Por. I'm griev'd I undertook it.

Marc. What? Does the barbarous maid infult my heart, My aking heart! and triumph is my pains. That I cou'd cast her from my thoughts for ever!

Por Away! you're too suspicious in your griess; Lucia, though sworn never to think of love,

Compassionates

Compassionates your pains, and pities you.

Marc. Compassionates my pains, and pities me! What is compassion when 'tis void of love! Fool that I was to choose so cold a friend To urge my cause! compassionates my pains! Pr'ythee what art, what rhet rick didft thou use To gain this mighty boon? she pities me !-To one that asks the warm returns of love. Compassion's cruelty, 'tis scorn, 'tis death-

Por. Marcus, no more! have I deserved this treatment? Marc. What have I faid? O Portius, O forgive me! A foul exasperated in ills falls out

With ev'ry thing, its friend, itself-but hah! What means that shout, big with the sounds of war?

What new alarm?

Por. A second, louder yet,

Swells in the winds, and comes more full upon us.

Marc. Oh, for some glorious cause to fall in battle! Lucia, thou hast undone me! thy disdain Has broke my heart: 'tis death must give me ease.

Por: Quick, let us hence; who knows if Cato's life Stand fure? O Marcus, I am warm'd, my heart Leaps at the trumpet's voice, and burns for glory. [Exeunt.

Our first design, my friend, has prov'd abortive;

Syph. How? will Sempronius turn a woman's flave!

Semp. Think not thy friend can ever feel the fost Unmanly warmth and tenderness of love.

Syphax, I long to clasp that haughty maid,
And bend her stubborn virtue to my passion:

When I have gone thus far, 1'd cast her off.

Syph. Well faid! that's spoken like thyself, Sempronius.

What hinders then, but that thou find her out,

And hurry her away by manly force.?

Syph. Thou shalt have juba's dress, and suba's guards:

Seems to appear before the flaves, that watch them,

Semp. Heav'ns what a thought is there! Marcia's my own!
How will my bosom swell with anxious joy,
When I behold her struggling in my arms,
With glowing beauty, and disorder'd charms;
While fear and anger, with alternate grace,

Pant in her breast, and vary in her face! So Pluto seiz'd of Proserpine, convey'd

To hell's tremenduous gloom, th' affrighted maid, There grimly smil'd, pleas'd with the beauteous prize,

Nor envy'd Jove his fun-shine and his skies.

LUCIA, MARCIA.

LUCIA.

OW tell me, Marcia, tell me from thy foul, If thou believ'st 'tis possible for woman To fuffer greater ills than Lucia fuffers?

Mar. O Lucia, Lucia, might my big-fwoln heart Vent all its griefs, and give a loofe to forrow: Marcia cou'd answer thee in fighs, keep pace With all thy woes, and count out tear for tear.

Luc. I know thour'rt doom'd alike, to be belov'd By Juba, and thy father's friend Sempronius. But which of these has power to charm like Portius!

Mar. Still I must beg thee not to name Sempronius! Lucia, I like not that loud boift'rous man: Juba, to all the brav'ry of a hero Adds foftest love, and more than female sweetness: Tuba might make the proudest of our fex, Any of woman-kind, but Marcia happy.

Luc. And why not Marcia? Come, you strive in vain To hide your thoughts from one, who knows too well The inward glowings of a heart in love.

Mar. While Cato lives, his daughter has no right To love or hate, but as his choice directs.

Luc. But shou'd this father give you to Sempronius! Mar. I dare not think he will: but if he should-Why wilt thou add to all the griefs I fuffer Imaginary ills, and fancy'd tortures? I hear the found of feet ! they march this way! Let us retire, and try if we can drown Each fofter thought in sense of present danger. Enter SEMPRONIUS, dress'd like Juba, with Numidian guards.

SEMPRONIUS.

THE deer is lodg'd, I've track'd her to her covert.

Be fure you mind the word, and when I give it,
Rush in at once, and seize upon your prey.

Let not her cries or tears have force to move you,

How will the young Numidian rave to see
His mistress lost? If ought could glad my soul,
Beyond th' enjoyment of so bright a prize,
'Twould be to torture that young gay barbarian.

But heark, what noise! death to my hopes! 'tis he,
'Tis Juba's self! there is but one way left

He must be murder'd, and a passage cut
Through those his guards—Hah, dastards, do you tremble!
Or act like men, or by you azure heav'n—

Enter JUBA.

Jub. What do I see? Who's this that dares usurp. The guards and habit of Numidia's Prince?

Semp One that was born to scourge thy arrogance,

Prefumptuous youth!

in

Jub. What can this mean? Sempronius!

Semp. My fword shall answer thee. Have at thy heart.

Jub. Nay, then beware thy own, proud barbarous man.

[Semp falls. His guards surrender.

Semp. Curse on my stars! am I then doom'd to fall By a boy's hand, disfigur'd in a vile Numidian dress, and for a worthless woman? Gods, I'm destracted! this my close of life! O for a peal of thunder that would make Earth, sea, and air, and heav'n, and Cato tremble! [Dies. Jub. With what a spring his furious soul broke loose,

And left the limbs still quiv'ring on the ground !

LUCIA.

SURE 'twas the clash of swords; my troubled heart
Is so cast down, and sunk amid t its forrows,
It throbs, with fear, and akes at every found.
O Marcia, shou'd thy brothers for my sake!

I die away with horror at the thought

Mar. See, Lucia, fee! here's blood! here's blood and murder!

Hah! a Numidian! heav'ns preserve the Prince;
The face lies muffled up within the garment,
But hah! death to my fight! a diadem,
And purple robes! O gods! 'tis he, 'tis he!
Juba, the loveliest youth that ever warm'd
A virgin's heart, Juba lies dead before us!

Luc. Now, Marcia, now call up to thy affistance Thy wonted strength, and constancy of mind; Thou can'st not put it to a greater trial.

Mar. Lucia, look there, and wonder at my patience, Have I not cause to rave, and beat my breast,

To rend my heart with grief, and run destracted!

Luc. What can I think or fay to give thee comfort?

Mar. Talk not of comfort, 'tis for lighter ills:

Behold a light, that strikes all comfort dead.

Enter JUBA listning.

I will indulge my forrows, and give way
To all the pangs and fury of despair,
That man, that best of men, deserv'd it from me.
Jub. What do I hear? And was the false Sempronius
That best of men? O had I fall'n like him.

And

And cou'd have thus been mourn'd, I had been happy.

Luc. Here will I stand, companion in thy woes,

And help thee with my tears; when I behold

A loss like thine I half forget my own.

Mar. 'Tis not in fate to ease my tortur'd breast:
This empty world, to me a joyless desart,

Jub. I'm on the rack! was he so near her heart!

Mar. O he was all made up of love and charms,

Whatever maid cou'd wish, or man admire:

Delight of ev'ry eye! When he appear'd,

A secret pleasure gladned all that saw him;

But when he talk'd, the proudest Roman blush'd

Jub. I shall run mad _______ Mar. O Juba! Juba! Juba!

Jub. What means that voice? Did she not call on Juba?

Mar. Why do I think on what he was! he's dead!

He's dead, and never knew how much I lov'd him.

Lucia, who knows but his poor bleeding heart,

Amidst its agonies, remember d Marcia,

And the last words he utter'd call'd me cruel!

Alas, he knew not, hapless youth, he knew not

Marcia's whole soul was sull of love and Juba!

Jub Where am I! do I live! or am indeed What Marcia thinks! all is Elysium round me!

Mar. Ye dear remains of the most lov'd of men!

Nor modesty nor virtue here forbid

That dear embrace, and to return it too With mutual warmth and eagerness of love.

Mar. With pleasure and amaze, I stand transported!
Sure 'tis a dream! dead and alive at once!
If thou art Juba, who lies there?

Jub A wretch,
Difguis'd like Juba on a curs'd design.
The tale is long, nor have I heard i out,
Thy father knows it all. I could not bear

And

To leave thee in the neighbourhood of death.
But flew, in all the hafte of love to find thee;
I found thee weeping, and confess this once,
Am wrapp'd with joy to see my Marcia's tears.

Mar. I've been surpris'd in an unguarded hour, But must not now go back: the love that lay Half smother'd in my breast, has broke through all Its weak restraints, and burns in its full lustre; I cannot, if I wou'd, conceal it from thee.

7ub. I'm lost in ecstacy ! And dost thou love,

Thou charming maid?

Mar. And dost thou live to ask it?

Jub. This, this is life indeed! life worth preferving, Such life as Juba never felt till now!

Mar. Believe me, Prince, before I thought thee dead, I did not know myself how much I lov'd thee.

Jub. O fortunate mistake! Mar. O happy Marcia!

Jub. My joy! my best belov'd! my only wish! How shall I speak the transport of my soul!

Mar. Lucia, thy arm! oh let me rest upon it!

The vital blood, that had forsook my heart,
Returns again in such tumultuous tides,
It quite o'ercomes me. Lead to my apartment.

O Prince, I blush to think what I have said,
But sate has wrested the confession from me;
Go on, and prosper in the paths of honour.

Thy virtue will excuse my passion for thee,
And make the gods propitious to our love.

[Ex. Marcia and Lucia.

Jub. I am so blest, I fear 'tis all a dream. Fortune, thou now hast made amends for all Thy past unkindness, I absolve my stars. What the Numidia add her conquer'd towns And provinces to swell the victor's triumph! Juba will never at his fate repine; Let Cæsar have the world, if Marcia's mine.

A March at a Distance.

Enter CATO and LUCIUS.

Lucius.

I Stand astonish'd! what, the bold Sempronius!

That still broke foremost through the crowd of patriots,

As with a hurricane of zeal transported,

And virtuous ev'n to madness—

Cato. Trust me, Lucius,
Our civil discords have produc'd such crimes,
Such monstruous crimes, I am surprised at nothing.

—O Lucius, I am sick of this bad world!
The day-light and the sun grow painful to me.

Enter Portius

But fee where Portius comes! what means this haste?
Why are thy looks thus chang'd?

Por. My heart is griev'd,
I bring such news as will afflict my father.

Cato. Has Cæfar shed more Roman blood?

Por. Not so.

The traitor Syphax, as within the square
He exercis'd his troops, the signal given,
Flew off at once with his Numidian horse
To the South gate, where Marcus holds the watch.
I saw, and call'd to stop him but in vain,
He tost his arm alost, and proudly told me,
He would not stay and perish like Sempronius.

Cato. Perfidious men! but haste my son, and see
Thy brother Marcus acts a Roman's part. [Exit Portius
— Lucius the torrent bears too hard upon me:
Justice gives way to force: the conquer'd world.
Is Cæsar's: Cato has no business in it.

Luc. While pride, oppression, and injustice reign, The world will still demand her Cato's presence.

F

In pity to mankind, submit to Cæsar, And reconcile thy mighty soul to life.

Cato. Would Lucius have me live to swell the number Of Cæsar's slaves, or by a base submission Give up the cause of Rome and own a tyrant?

Luc. The victor never will impose on Cato Ungen'rous terms. His enemies confess The virtues of humanity are Cæsar's.

Cato. Curse on his virtues! they've undone his country.

Such popular humanity is treason—

But see young Juba! the good youth appears

Full of the guilt of his persidious subjects.

Luz. Alas, poor Prince! his fate deserves compassion.

Euter Juba.

Tuo, I blush, and am confounded to appear Before thy presence, Cato. Cato. What's thy crime? Fub. I'm a Numidian. Cato. And a brave one too, Thou hast a Roman foul. 7ub. Hast thou not heard Of my false countrymen? Cato. Alas, young Prince, Falshood and fraud shoot up in ev'ry soil, The product of all climes-Rome has its Cæfars. Jub. 'Tis generous thus to comfort the distress'd. Cato. 'Tis just to give applause where 'tis deserv'd: Thy virtue, Prince, has flood the test of fortune, Like purest gold, that, tortur'd in the furnace. Comes out more bright, and brings forth all its weight. Fub. What shall I answer thee? my ravish'd heart O'erflows with fecret joy: I'd rather gain Thy praise, O Cato, than Numidia's empire.

Re-enter Portius.

Por. Misfortune on misfortune! grief on grief!

My brother Marcus—

Cato. Hah! what has he done?

Has he forfook his post? Has he given way?

Did he look tamely on, and let 'em pass?

Por. Scarce had I left my father, but I met him Born on the shields of his surviving foldiers, Breathless and pale, and cover'd o'er with wounds. Long, at the head of his few faithful friends, He stood the shock of a whole host of foes, 'Till obstinately brave, and bent on death, Opprest with multitudes he greatly fell.

Cato. I'm fatisfy'd.

Por. Nor did he fall before His fword had pierc'd through the falle heart of Syphax. Yonder he lies. I faw the hoary traitor Grin in the pangs of death, and bite the ground.

Cato. Thanks to the gods! my boy has done his duty. -Portius, when I am dead, be fure thou place

His urn near mine.

Por. Long may they keep afunder! Luc. O Cato, arm thy foul with all its patience; See where the corpfe of thy dead fon approaches! The citizens and fenators, alarm'd, Have gather'd round it, and attend it weeping.

CATO meeting the Corpse.

Cato. Welcome, my fon! here lay him down, my friends, Full in my fight, that I may view at leifure The bloody coarse, and count those glorious wounds. -How beautiful is death, when earn'd by virtue! Who would not be that youth? What pity is it That we can die but once to serve our country! -Why fits this fadness on your brows, my friends? I shou'd have blush'd if Cato's house had stood Secure, and flourish'd in a civil war. -Portius, behold thy brother, and remember Thy life is not thy own while Rome demands it. [Afide.

7ub. Was ever man like this!

Cato. Alas, my friends!

Why mourn you thus? Let not a private loss. Afflict your hearts. 'Tis Rome requires our tears, The mistress of the world, the feat of empire, The nurse of heroes, the delight of gods,

That

That humbled the proud tyrants of the earth, And fet the nations free, Rome is no more. O liberty! O virtue! O my country!

Jub. Behold that upright man! Rome fills his eyes With tears, that flow'd not o'er his own dead son. [Afide.

Cato. Whate'er the Roman virtue has subdu'd,
The sun's whole course, the day and year are Cæsar's.
For him the self-devoted Decii dy'd,
The Fabii fell, and the great Scipio's conquer'd:
Ev'n Pompey fought for Cæsar. Oh my friends!
How is the toil of sate, the work of ages,
The Roman empire sall'n! O curst ambition!
Fall'n into Cæsar's hands! Our great fore-sathers
Had left him nought to conquer but his country.

Jub. While Cato lives, Cæfar will blush to see Mankind enslav'd, and be asham'd of empire.

Cato. Cæsar asham'd! Las he not seen Pharsalia!
Luc. Cato, 'tis time thou save thyself and us.

Cato. Lose not a thought on me, I'm out of danger, Heav'n will not leave me in the victor's hand. Cæsar shall never say I conquer'd Cato. But oh my friends, your safety sills my heart With anxious thoughts: a thousand secret terrors. Rise in my soul: How shall I save my friends? 'Tis now, O Cæsar, I begin to sear thee.

Luc. Cæsar has mercy, if we ask it of him.

Cato. Then ask it, I conjure you! let him know
Whate'er was done against him, Cato did it.

Add, if you please, that I request it of him,
That I myself, with tears, request it of him,
The virtue of my friends may pass unpunish'd.

Juba, my heart is troubled for thy sake.

Shou'd I advise thee to regain Numidia,
Or seek the conqueror?

Fub. If I forfake thee

Whilst I have life, may heav'n abandon Juba!

Cato. Thy virtues, Prince, if I foresee aright,
Will one day make thee great; at Rome hereafter,
'Twill be no crime to have been Cato's friend.

Wrestling with vice and faction: now thou see'st me
Spent, overpow'r'd, despairing of success;
Let me advise thee to retreat betimes
To thy paternal seat the Sabine field,
Where the great Censor toil'd with his own hands,
And all our frugal ancestors were bless'd
In humble virtues, and a rural life.
There live retired, pray for the peace of Rome,
Content thyself to be obscurely good.

Por. I hope my father does not recommend A life to Portius, that he scorns himself.

Cato. Farewel, my friends! if there be any of you Who dare not trust the victor's elemency, Know there are ships prepar'd by my command, (Their sails already op'ned to the winds)

That shall convey you to the wisht-for port.

Is there aught else, my friends I can do for you?

The conqueror draws near. Once more farewel!

If e'er we meet hereaster, we shall meet
In happier climes, and on a safer shore,

Where Cæsar never shall approach us more.

ACT

ACT V. SCENE I.

CATO folus, sitting in a thoughtful posture: in his hand Plato's book on the immortality of the soul. A drawn sword on the table by him.

T must be so-Plato, thou reason's well-Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond defire, This longing after immortality? Or whence this fecret dread and inward horror, Of falling into nought? Why shrinks the foul Back on herself, and startles at destruction? 'T'is the divinity that thirs within us; 'Tis heav'n itself, that points out an hereaster, And intimates eternity to man. Eternity! thou pleasing, dreadful, thought! Through what variety of untry'd being, Through what new scenes and changes must we pass ! The wide, th' unbounded prospect lies before me; But shadows, clouds, and darkness, rest upon it, Here will I hold. If there's a pow'r above us, (And that there is all nature cries aloud Through all her works) He must delight in virtue; And that which he delights in, must be happy. But when! or where! - This world was made for Cæfar. I'm weary of conjectures-This must end 'em. Laying his hand on his fword.

Thus am I doubly arm'd: my death and life, My bane and antidote are both before me: This in a moment brings me to an end; But this informs me I shall never die. The foul, secur'd in her existence, smiles At the drawn dagger, and defies its point. The stars shall sade away, the sun himself Grow dim with age, and nature sink in years, But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth, Unhurt amidst the war of elements, The wrecks of matter, and the crush of worlds,

Cato. Rash youth, forbear!

Por. O let the pray'rs, th' intreaties of your friends, Their tears, their common danger, wrest it from you.

Cato. Wou'dst thou betray me? Wou'dst thou give me up A slave, a captive, into Cæsar's hands? Retire, and learn obedience to a father, Or know, young man?

Por. Look not thus sternly on me; You know I'd rather die than difobey you.

PORTIUS, MARCIA.

PORTIUS.

Our father will not calt away a life
So needful to us all, and to his country.
He is retir'd to reft, and feems to cherish
Thoughts full of peace. He has dispatch'd me hence
With orders, that bespeak a mind composed,
And studious for the safety of his friends.
Marcia, take care that none desturb his slumbers.

Watch round his couch, and soften his repose,
Banish his forrows, and becalm his soul
With easy dreams; remember all his virtues!
And show mankind that goodness is your care.

Luc. Alas, I tremble when I think on Cato,
In every view, in every thought I tremble!
Cato is stern, and awful as a god,
He knows not how to wink at human frailty,
Or pardon weakness, that he never felt.

Marc. Though stern and awful to the foes of Rome, He is all goodness, Lucia, always mild, Compassionate and gentle to his friends. Fill'd with domestick tenderness, the best, The kindest father! I have ever found him Easy, and good, and bounteous to my wishes.

Luc. 'Tis his confent alone can make us bless'd. Marcia, we both are equally involv'd In the same intricate, perplex'd, distress. The cruel hand of sate, that has destroy'd Thy brother Marcus, whom we both lament—

Mar. And ever shall lament, unhappy youth!

Luc. Has set my soul at large, and now I stand

Loose of my vow. But who knows Cato's thoughts?

Who knows how yet he may dipose of Portius,

Or how he has determin'd of thy self?

Mar. Let him but live ! commit the rest to heav'n.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sweet are the flumbers of the virtuous man!

O Marcia, I have feen thy godlike father:

Some pow'r invisible supports his foul,

And bears it up in all its wonted greatness.

A kind refreshing sleep is fall'n upon him:

I saw him stretcht at ease, his fancy lost

In pleasing dreams; as I drew near his couch, He smiled, and cry'd, Cæsar thou can'st not hurt me.

Mar. His mind still labours with some dreadful thought, Luc. Lucia, why all this grief, these floods of sorrow? Dry up thy, tears, my child, we all are safe While Cato lives—his presence will protect us.

Enter JUBA.

Jub. Lucius, the horsemen are return'd from viewing. The number, strength, and posture of our foes, Who now encamp within a short hour's march. On the high point of you bright western tower. We ken them from afar, the setting sun Plays on their shining arms and burning helmets, And covers all the field with gleams of sire.

Luc. Marcia, 'tis time we should awake thy father.
Cæsar is still disposed to give us terms,
And waits at distance 'till he hears from Cato.

Enter PORTIUS.

Portius, thy looks speak somewhat of importance, What tidings dost thou bring? methinks I see Unusual gladness sparkling in thy eyes.

Por. As I was hasting to the port, where now My father's friends, impatient for a passage, Accuse the lingring winds, a fail arrived From Pompey's son, who through the realms of Spain Calls out for vengeance on his father's death, And rouses the whole nation up to arms.

Were Cato at their head, once more might Rome Aftert her rights, and claim her liberty.

But heark! what means that groan! O give me way, And'let me sly into my father's presence.

[Exit.

Luc. Cato amidst his slumbers thinks on Rome,
And in the wild disorder of his soul
Mourns o'er his country; hah! a second groan—
Heav'n guard us all——

Of one who sleeps! 'tis agonizing pain,
'Tis death is in that found,—

Spoken by Mrs. PORTER.

7HAT odd fantastick things we women do! Who wou'd not liften when young lovers woo? But die a maid, yet have the choice of two! Ladies are often cruel to their coft : To give you pain, themselves they punish most, Vows of virginity should well be weigh'd; Too oft they're cancell'd, tho' in convents made. Wou'd you revenge fuch rash resolves-you may: Be spiteful-and believe the thing we say, We hate you when you're easily faid nay. How needless, if you knew us, were your fears? Let love have eyes, and beauty will have ears. Our hearts are form'd as you yourfelves would chuse, Too proud to ask, too humble to refuse: We give to merit, and to wealth we fell: He fighs with most success that settles well. The woes of wedlock with the joys we mix; 'Tis best repenting in a coach and six.

Blame not our conduct, fince we but pursue Those lively lessons we have learn'd from you: Your breasts no more the fire of beauty warms, But wicked wealth usurps the pow'r of charms; What pains to get the gaudy thing you hate, To swell in show, and be a wretch in state!

At plays you ogle, at the ring you bow; Ev'n churches are no fanctuaries now: There, golden idols all your vows receive. She is no goddess that has nought to give. Oh, may once more the happy age appear. When words were artless, and the thoughts fincere: When gold and grandeur were unenvy'd things, And courts less coveted than groves and springs. Love then shall only mourn when truth complains. And constancy feel transport in its chains. Sighs with fuccefs their own foft anguish tell. And eyes shall utter what the lips conceal: Virtue again to its bright station climb, And beauty fear no enemy but time, The fair shall listen to desert alone, And every Lucia find a Cato's fon. ten lint files afnoy neby new State 57/
